Justice and Civilized Humanity

1. What is Human Rights?
2. What is Morality Imperative of Justice and Civilized Humanity?

Answer

1. Human Rights are rights that we have because we are human beings. Human Rights are Universal and Inherent to all nationalities, sex, national or ethnic origins, colors, religions, languages, or any other status without exception. Human Rights were first adopted and recognized by the UN in 1948 in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR). In the UDHR human rights have a few key principles which are
 - a. Universal and inalienable
 - b. Indivisible and interdependent
 - c. Equal and non-discriminatory
 - d. Both rights and obligations
2. The Morality Imperative of Justice and Civilized Humanity is a principle that dictates that we as fellow human beings should respect each other as fellow humans with the principle of justice, humanity, and morality.
